

Students Questions About Their Placements

Students entering field instruction usually have many questions that they will either ask you or will have on their minds. To help you prepare to begin to “tune into” student’s concerns here are would be some questions.

What are the kinds of things I (the student) will be doing and learning here?

What systems will I be working with?

Are you located in the same service area and in the same physical vicinity as I am?

Will I have more than one supervisor (field instructor)?

Who do I turn to for help if you are not around?

What is the largest single problem or issue facing your organization (e.g. agency or setting) that I should know about?

What kinds of results would you like to see me produce as a student?

Where can I hang my coat, rest my feet, and have coffee?

What do I have to be careful about?
